Descriptors-*Adult Education, *Annotated Bibliographies, Broadcast Industry, Community Development, *Historical Reviews, Labor Education, Organizations (Groups), *Reference Materials, Rural Extension, State Programs, *Teaching Methods, Units of Study (Subject Fields), Universities, Vocational Schools, Voluntary Agencies

Identifiers-*Australia, New Guinea

General works (bibliographies, year books, directories, encyclopedias, periodicals), historical and descriptive surveys and biographical notes, international, national, and state organizations and movements, adult education methods and subject fields, theoretical aspects, service to special clientele groups (women, youth, immigrants, aborigines, armed forces, older adults, prisoners, and others), and adult education in Papua, New Guinea, constitute the major parts of this 868-item retrospective bibliography on adult education in Australia. The early mechanics' institutes, labor and workers' education, agricultural education, university extension, community development, the humanities, parent education, and library adult education, are among the subject areas and program types reviewed. Educational methods include correspondence study, group discussion, tutorial classes, residential and nonresidential classes and seminars, and independent reading. Entries are grouped under subject headings and arranged chronologically within sections. Also included are author, subject, and periodical indexes. (ly)

PREFACE

A number of short bibliographical lists include writings on Australian adult education, but this is the first attempt to bring together in one volume in a systematic way most of the more important writings on adult education in Australia. The lack of a work of this kind is a handicap to those interested in research or in the study of some aspect of adult education, and in a way this bibliography is a result of my own needs and difficulties in carrying out some research into the history of adult education.

The entries have been selected from writings since 1835 and include those published up to the end of 1965. The criterion for selection was that the article be written about Australia or have some particular relevance for Australians. Books have been included but the majority of the entries relate to pamphlets and articles in periodicals and journals. Some slight articles provide the only information available at present or are the only indicators of opinion on certain topics. It is to be hoped that the content of such articles will be incorporated into more comprehensive publications as research and the study of adult education increases.

The entries are grouped under subject headings. Within each section they have been arranged in chronological order. This arrangement is complicated by the importance of the states in the Australian system of education. I have tried to overcome this by providing cross references wherever required, especially at the end of some sections. The indexes, too, have been arranged to supplement the list of contents and should be used in conjunction with it to facilitate reference to a particular topic, trend or movement in adult education.

All the cited works of a writer are listed after his name in the author index to make reference easier, and the information given about each periodical in the special list provided should prove helpful to those interested.

It is hoped to keep the bibliography up to date by the issue of supplements and their incorporation later into a revised edition. Any lists or suggestions that readers may have will be welcomed and we would appreciate receiving a copy or notice of any material that has been overlooked, or that may be published in the future.

Acknowledgements

This publication was made possible by the interest and assistance of the National Library of Australia and the Australian Association of Adult Education. I should like to thank all those who have assisted in its compilation: Mr. Harold White, the National Librarian; his staff at the National Library of Australia; librarians in other states and universities who have answered my inquiries; and my colleagues in adult education who have made helpful suggestions and supplied information on particular points. I owe a special debt of gratitude to Mr. John Balnaves, Miss Janice Kenny and Mrs. Barbara Goodhew of the National Library. Their experience and advice and the considerable practical assistance they gave have been indispensable.

Includes untitled addresses by: Lord Wakehurst - on meeting with Mansbridge, influence of public men on W.E.A. and value of tutorial classes. p. 3-8.
J.G. Medley - on influuence of Mansbridge and Sir James Barrett; what is basically wrong with W.E.A. p.8-11.
J.G. McKenzie - on variety of adult education, its part in shaping the post-war world and meeting rapid social changes p.11-14.
Lloyd Ross - on the problem of how to be educationally and socially purposeful and the role of the W.E.A. p.14-17.
For papers read see 292, 382, 450, 456, 500, 519, 716.

716 Mills, R.C. Adult education as a Commonwealth movement. In Duncan, W.G.K., ed. The future of adult education in Australia. p.17-22. (see 715).
Considers adult education as an Australia-wide movement and raises general issues such as the reasons for a forward movement and what kind of adult education is needed.

717 Eddy, W.H.C. Adult education as a movement. Australian highway, v.28 (Oct. 1946) 80-81.
A consideration of adult education as a movement and the relation of this to the expansion of adult education.

718 Cumming, I. Live and learn: a plan for an educated citizenry. M.Ed. thesis. University of Melbourne, 1946. 537p.
A comparative study of the philosophy and history of adult education; with a plan for intelligent citizenship embracing all levels from school to adult education.

719 Stewart, D. The purpose of adult education. Australian highway, v.31 (Dec. 1949) 81-82.
A criticism of ideas put forward by T.H. Coates and F. Alexander. (see 51, 54).

720 Coates, T.H. The measurement of adult interests. Ph.D. thesis, London University, 1950.
A methodological study aimed at establishing a suitable method of inquiry, especially among students in adult classes.

721 Sanderson, A.C. Society and adult education. Australian highway, v.32 (Apr. 1950) 23-24.
Argues that the "purpose" of adult education should not need explanation since men need to develop their physical and their mental powers.

722 Stewart, D. Adult education - a living movement. Australian highway, v.32 (Apr. 1950) 17-18.
The importance of an active voluntary movement for adult education.

723 Rowley, C.D. The task of adult education in 1951. Education news, v.3 (Oct. 1951) 23-26.
Argues that technical efficiency is increasing at the expense of cultural opportunities, that trade union education is limited, that universities should confine themselves to research and training and that local authorities should play a more important role in adult education.

724 Rowley, C.D. Ends and means - an Australian view. Adult education (London), v.25 (Spring 1952) 277-283.
Argues a need for long-term aims and purposes to safeguard the welfare of citizens through educational means. Refers to Commonwealth Reconstruction Training Scheme, trade unions, universities and local authorities.

725 Wilson, J.L.J. New horizons in adult education. Australian highway, v.34 (May 1952) 23-25.
Argues that the need now is for education for social responsibility, and that adult education should help and inspire individuals rather than meet the needs of organised groups.

726 Higgins, E.M. As it strikes an antipodean. Tutors' bulletin of adult education (Leeds), v.91 (June 1953). 8-11.
Australian views on adult education in England.

728 Oeser, O.A. Adult education and social change. Sydney, Workers' Educational Association of N.S.W., 1954. 14p. (Mansbridge memorial lecture).
Processed.
Stresses the force of social changes and the function of the W.E.A. to prevent social disintegration.

729 Warburton, J.W. The aim of adult education. Australian highway, v.39 (Aug. 1957) 46-47.
Claims that there has been little change in the interest in subject matter but a great change in the social constitution of adult classes.

730 Thomas, Geoffrey. The aim of adult education. Australian highway, v.39 (Oct. 1957) 69.
The writer's claim is that this should be the re-discovery of "inborn" wisdom.

731 Groombridge, B. New objectives for adult education [with editorial comment] Australian highway, v.39 (July 1958) 33-38.
Groombridge's article in Adult education (London) v.30 (Mar. 1958) 197-215 is summarised and commented upon adversely. In Groombridge's view adult education could advance only by relating itself to contemporary problems and social change.

732 The fallacy of two-percentism? Australian highway, v.39 (July 1958) 33.
Contrasts the attitude towards adult education of Groombridge (see 731) and Alexander (see 51, 64, 71) with that of the W.E.A. of N.S.W.

733 Blackman, Nance. The humble amateur. Adult education, v.3 (Sept. 1958) 21-23.
Describes the satisfactions gained from group membership and participation in discussion and artistic endeavour.

734 Shipp, George. Groombridgism and education [with editorial comment]. Australian highway, v.39 (Dec. 1958) 78-84.
The wirter argues that the social problem-solving approach is not concerned with education. (see 731, 732).

735 Wright, C.J. A philosophy and outline for the educational programme of the Methodist Church. Doctoral dissertation. Columbia University, 1958.

736 Lengrand, Paul. Adult education. Fundamental and adult education, v.10 (1958) 91-100.
Review from an international viewpoint of the nature of adult education, the types of institutions which provide it and the methods employed.

737 Wilson, J.L.J. Keeping humanity human. Australian highway, v.40 (July 1959) 98-101.
Argues that the increase in knowledge and its application makes adult education more necessary, especially in the use of leisure and in liberal studies.

738 Warburton, J.W. Motivation and adult education. In Adult education conference, 1960. Proceedings. (see 170).
Compares methods used where motivation is strong (arts and crafts refresher courses and community studies) and where it is weak.

739 Williams, J.V. The role of adult education. South Australian teachers' journal, (Feb. 1961) 29.
Summary of an address given at a seminar on adult education held at the University of Adelaide.

740 Briggs, Asa. Adult education in a changing society. Australian highway, v.42 (May 1961) 26-29.
Mansbridge memorial lecture, 1960.
The lecturer argues that educational principles need to be related to a changing social context, describes changes in the educational, social and communications systems and refers to some advantages the W.E.A. has as an educational organisation.

741 A national purpose for adult education. W.E.A. bulletin, v.1 (Oct. 1961) 2.
Discusses what this should be in Australia.

742 Corbett, P.O.C. Interest, motive and control in adult education. Australian journal of adult education, v.1 (Dec. 1961) 30-33.
Describes three different situations commonly found in adult education and points to problems of interest, motive and control which they provoke.

743 Sheats, Paul H. Some common concerns. Australian journal of adult education, v.1 (Dec. 1961) 5-11.
Developing problems which cut across national boundaries, e.g. new nations and inadequacies in international, national and community adult education efforts.

744 Madgwick, R.B. Educational influences outside the school and the university. In The challenge to Australian education. Melbourne, F.W. Cheshire for the Australian College of Education, 1961. p.51-66.
The main influences are gathered together in groups - family, church, social and political groups, mass media - and these are all the concern of adult education.

745 Duncan, W.G.K. In defence of the common man. Sydney, Australian Broadcasting Commission, 1962. p.48-57. (Boyer lecture, 1962).
The speaker argued that education is life-long, raised questions about mass media, drew a distinction between the education of children and adults, and suggested that documentary films and community centres offered ways of meeting the educational needs of adults.

746 Harries, Owen. Social change and adult education. Australian journal of adult education, 2 (July 1962) 20-26.
Discusses issues raised by social changes and their relation to adult education.

747 Moriarty, O. Education in a democracy. W.E.A. bulletin. v.2 (Apr. 1963) 7-9.
Comment on the Boyer lecture by W.G.K. Duncan. (see 745).

748 Brennan, T. Some features of modern urban life of significance to a programme of education [with comments by Max Praed and reply by T. Brennan] Australian journal of adult education, v.4 (July 1964) 18-26.
From the premise that urban life is associational rather than communal the writer discusses the relevance of this for adult education.

749 Williams, Eric. Adult education and social changes. W.E.A. bulletin, v.2 (Apr. 1964) 2-5.
Observations on the Unesco Regional Seminar, Sydney, 1964.

750 Hely, A.S.M. Unesco seminar in Sydney. W.E.A. bulletin, v.2 (July 1964) 10-11.
A reply to E. Williams. (see 749).

751 Partridge, P.H. Expanding concepts of adult education. Adult education, v.9 (Sept.1964) 15-25; Australian journal of adult education, v.4 (Dec. 1964) 5-21; Australian Association of Adult Education. Annual conference, 1964. Proceedings. (see 177).
Discussing social change and its effect on contemporary theories of adult education, the writer notes the decline of social emancipation and voluntary organisations and refers to the increasing importance of vocational and technical education, the role of universities and the need for a continuum of forms and levels of adult education.

752 Nelson, A.J.A. Adult education in Australia. In Cowan, R.W.T., ed. Education for Australians; a symposium. Melbourne, F.W. Cheshire, 1964. p.239-254.
Claims that adult education is essential for national development, suggests the interest which it might serve and states some of its problems.

753 Burmeister, W. 'Voluntaryism' and adult education. Adult education, v.9 (Mar. 1965) 23-25.
A defence of the voluntary enterprise in adult education. (see 751).

754 Franklin, Richard. New themes and new frontiers in Australian adult education: an American impression. Australian journal of adult education, v. 5 (July 1965) 31-37.

New themes referred to are group and community development, while fresh thinking on the purpose of adult education and the beginning of research and training programmes are seen as new frontiers.

755 Eddy, W. H. C. Adult education: dynamics and voluntaryism. Australian journal of adult education, v. 5 (Dec. 1965) 10-21.

Sets out points of policy or evaluation where the writer disagrees with Partridge and suggests a dynamic for adult education in Australia in the next decade. (see 751).
